Helps Hospitals, Imaging Centers, Mobile Imaging Companies
Obtain and Maintain ACR Accreditation

Mt. Laurel, N.J., March 28, 2011 – USARAD.com LLC, a Joint Commission-accredited provider of outsourced radiology reading services, today announced the first-ever national quality assurance (QA) service to assist imaging facilities in achieving and maintaining American College of Radiology (ACR) accreditation. The new USARAD.com Peer Review Program is open to individual radiologists, hospital radiology departments, imaging centers, IDTFs, mobile imaging providers and multi-specialty physician groups.

ACR accreditation is now mandated by many payors including Medicare. Individual radiologists certified by the American Board of Radiology after 2004 also can utilize this QA program to custom-tailor their individual Practice Quality Improvement (PQI) projects required for the Maintenance of Certificate (MOC).

Mary Daubert, CAO of USARAD.com, noted, “Meeting full QA requirements is often beyond the reach of small and solo radiologist practices. We have successfully implemented this program internally as well as with select clients and we are now offering it nationwide. The program was developed to be extremely cost effective and efficient and can be implemented in a matter of days.”

With an existing national network of board-certified radiologists and advanced technology, USARAD.com possesses the infrastructure to offer this program on a national level. The program will use a random sampling of radiology reports and grade them on a six-point scale on various imaging and reporting parameters. Additionally, USARAD.com board certified and fellowship trained reviewing radiologists will provide feedback on a reading radiologist’s style and depth of reporting as well as such medicolegal aspects as communication with referring physicians. This service will enhance the practice’s performance and benefit individual radiologists in measuring improvement on a quarterly or annual basis.

Michael Yuz, MD, MBA and founder of USARAD.com, said, “The primary goals of the program include improvement in quality of interpretations, client satisfaction, communication with referring physicians, overall physician performance as well as reduction in errors. Ultimately, this will make an important difference in patient care and enhance outcomes.”

USARAD.com, headquartered in Mt. Laurel, New Jersey, is one of the fastest growing radiology groups in the country. The company covers all 50 states and works on a 24/7 basis for its clients.
